

CCC Newsletter # 04-15

As we enter April, we begin to see the real start of the “Car Show Season”! Yippee! I hope all of you are ready to roll out your classic and attend a few good shows. It's especially nice to see so many shows donate all or part of the proceeds to great charities!

When I started to consider what trivia I should feature for April, I decided to think small. (That's a hint!)

So here we go!! It's trivia time for April!

1. What American car manufacturer was the first to install four wheel disc brakes on all of their models?
2. Who built the first post WWII American sports car?
3. What American car manufacturer was the first to introduce a Sport Utility vehicle?
4. And what company was the first to put shelves on the inside of their refrigerator doors?
 (“What?” you're saying!)

Look for the exiting answers after the show listings!

Rallye Productions offers you More for Less!!! Buy Dash Plaques from us and receive a “sponsorship” discount, magnetic goodie bag stuffers, and a $25 RockAuto auto parts gift certificate for your event.

So with that prelude out of the way, we go to the shows!

OK Gang, here's the much anticipated answers to this month's trivia.

1. Crosley! He did it in 1949 on his full line of cars and trucks, on all 4 wheels, and on cars that sold for less than $1000. Unfortunately Crosley didn't figure on the damage that the salt on Northern roads would cause to the alloy the calipers were made from; they were replaced with conventional drum brakes in mid 1950.
2. Crosley built the first production post WWII American Sports Car. The Hot Shot came out in 1949, 5 years ahead of the Chevy Corvette. With it's 26.5 hp engine, the Hot Shot competed in the 6 hours of Sebring at a fierce average speed of 52mph, and was able to attain a top speed of 90mph. (whoooo haaa!)

3. Again with Crosley! He built the first Sport Utility Vehicle in late 1947.

SPORTS-UTILITY

—America's lowest priced car. Removable fabric top and sides.
Removable rear seat. Lists at $799

4. And finally . . . hold your breath . . . The Shelvador, by Crosley! His refrigerator with shelves in the door is possibly the most taken for granted Crosley first. Powel Crosley didn't invent it but knew a good idea when it is presented. He bought the idea, and for years competitors had models standing in front of their open doors so you could not see what was missing.

Powel Crosley Jr., September 18, 1886 – March 28, 1961

Mr Crosley was 74 when he died of a heart attack. Crosley liked to label himself "the man with 50 jobs in 50 years," a catchy sobriquet that was far from true, although he did have more than a dozen jobs before he got into automobile accessories. He helped quite a few inventors up the ladder of success by buying the rights to their inventions and sharing in the profits. His work provided employment and products for millions of people.

Guess that's about it for this month, but please keep sending in shows and events for the next newsletter! And don't forget to check the website for additions as they come in. This newsletter always seems to jog the memory of some, and I get hit with numerous submissions just after it is sent out. They are posted within a few days, so check back often.

And the legal stuff! If you wish to be removed from this distribution, simply bounce the email back with "remove" in the subject line. I will send you one confirmation that you have been removed, and then that's it!

One last note; gmail has recently begun limiting the number of emails you can send in one day. They say it's to reduce spam, which is a good thing I guess. So I may begin a search of sites that don't place a numeric limitation. So for the next few months, or so, you may receive the newsletter a day or two early, or day or two late. We'll see

So until next time . . . go for a ride!

Brian
